

The Floods in the Greek Mythology compared to Noah's Flood

'MARIOLAKOS, I.' University of Athens, Department of Geology,
Division of Dynamic, Tectonic & Applied Geology, Athens, Greece

Apart from the Famous Noah's Flood which is mentioned in the Old Testament and it is known not only within the Christian community but to the non-Christians as well, Floods with similar content are also mentioned in the mythologies of many other nations.

In Greek mythology three catastrophic Floods are mentioned (recorded). The oldest one was the Dardanos Flood, followed by the Ogigos Flood. The latest one was the Deukalion Flood that probably took place during the same period that the Noah Flood occurred.

In the statement there is an effort for:

- i) The Correlation of various myths from eastern Mediterranean and South America.
- ii) The explanation of the geo-environmental events that triggered-originated them.