

FLUID-DYNAMIC CONCEPT OF THE FORMATION OF MINERAL DEPOSITS

SOKOLOV, B.A. and STAROSTIN, V.I. Moscow State University (Lomonosov), Moscow, Russia

Mineral deposits are formed in accordance with the laws governing the self-development of the Earth's crust. Fluid-dynamic systems serve as a universal factor creating favorable conditions for the transformation of dispersed elements in rocks into mineral deposits. Fluid flows percolate in the %0